DETAILED ACTIONResponse to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed on July 1st, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The applicant argues that neither Hoshino nor Asano teach or suggest a turbulator with a plurality of louvers spaced along a base of a strip and extending in a direction generally parallel to a longitudinal axis of the strip to direct fluid through the turbulator in the direction generally parallel to the longitudinal axis. The examiner disagrees. Asano does disclose a turbulator with plurality of louvers spaced along a base of a strip and extending in a direction generally parallel to a longitudinal axis of the strip (see figure 10).

It has been held that a recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus satisfying the claimed structural limitations. Ex parte Masham, 2 USPQ2d 1647 (1987).

The intended use statements are not given any patentable weight in this instance for example "to direct fluid through the turbulators generally in the direction parallel to the longitudinal axis".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 3743

Claims 1 through 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoshino et al. Patent No. 61-295494 in view of Asano et al. US Patent No. 5,078,207.

Hoshino discloses the applicant's invention as claimed with the exception of providing a connecting member having a bend.

Asano discloses a heat exchanger and fin for the same that does provide a connecting member having a bend (see figure 3). Therefore it would be obvious to modify Hoshino's invention by providing a connecting member having a bend in order to reduce the stresses on the turbulator.

Referring to claims 1 through 5, it has been held that a recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus satisfying the claimed structural limitations. Ex parte Masham, 2 USPQ2d 1647 (1987).

The intended use statements are not given any patentable weight in this instance for example "fluid flowing through the turbulator flows through the louvers in the direction generally parallel to the longitudinal axis".

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
